ADDITIONAL STREET LIGHTS IN DALY CITY WILL BE INSTALLED

The City Council met last Monday evening in regular session, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding. City Attorney McCurdy was present, after his recent illness, being much improved.

A communication was received from the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, asking permission to lay an underground cable to Hillside boulevard to improve the service. After being read and some thought given, the permission was granted.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company notifed the Council that owing to the increased use of street lights by the city, with a cut in street and highway rates, the city would be allowed a number of lights by the company without charge. This matter was placed in the hands of the light committee, who are rearranging the lighting scheme throughout our city.

The library committee reported that the library is now open after several needed improvements.

A committee from the Butchers' Union was present and spoke on the proposed new ordinance compelling all butcher shops to close on Sundays, and stated that this is favored by most of the master butchers in our district. The Council laid the matter over until next meeting to hear any protest that might be made before taking any further action.

The plans for the new park were presented to the Council by the city engineer, and this matter will be taken up Friday evening by the Council and engineer's office.

The street committee reported many uncompleted sidewalks in the Westend, where the street work is already completed. The Council ordered the engineer to prepare a plan and order this work done in the near future.

The Council will meet again in two weeks.

RADIO SERMON AT METHODIST CHURCH

A radio sermon will be the interesting feature at the Daly City Methodist church next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Walter John Sherman, pastor of the Temple Methodist church of San Francisco, the leading Methodist church of San Francisco, will broadcast a special sermon to the Daly City Methodist church.

Many special features will go to make up this interesting program. Mr. John H. McCallum, one of the outstanding business men of San Francisco, will send words of greeting to this church. A large radio will be installed in the church, through the courtesy of the Daly City Pharmacy.

You can not afford to miss this treat. It will be the first service of its kind ever held in San Francisco, or the peninsula. Please make it a point to be present.

Vacation is over, and we are waiting to welcome you back to the church and Sunday school. Let's begin right, and have a hundred per cent attendance at all services. Sunday school at 11 o'clock; Junior Epworth League at 6 p. m.; Epworth League at 7 p. m., and the special radio service at 8 p. m.

LOCAL BALL TEAM AGAIN VICTORIOUS

An interesting game of baseball was played last Sunday at the Jefferson Union high school grounds, the Daly City Merchants again coming out victorious, winning from the Mercantile Box team by the score of 2 to 0. It was a real ball game all the way and kept the spectators interested from the time the first ball was pitched until the last man was out.

Gus Ford twirled a great game for the Daly City Merchants, while his opponent, Hogan, need not be ashamed of his work. M. Reardon, the Merchants' catcher, was in fine form, as was Eddy, who was behind the plate for the Mercantile Box team.

Hawley, with a single, drove in the two runs scored.

There will be another game next Sunday at 2:30, at the Jefferson Union high school grounds. All lovers of baseball should be present and root for our boys.

NIGHT SCHOOL CLASSES BEGIN

Regular instruction in the evening classes for adults will begin on next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Jefferson Union high school. Registration has been going on during this week. There will be classes in English for foreign residents, Americanization, auto mechanics, bookkeeping, stenography and typewriting.

Principal Ferguson requests that all who desire to enter these classes enroll immediately.

RECORD ENROLLMENT AT JEFFERSON HIGH

Jefferson Union high school opened on Monday morning with the largest enrollment in its history. Over two hundred and fifty boys and girls were in attendance. Before the end of the month it is predicted that the number will be close to three hundred.

Registration of pupils had begun on the previous Friday so that the work of organizing the classes might be facilitated. The result was that short session classes were held on Monday morning for class enrollment and held again in the afternoon for distribution of text books and assignment of lessons. Tuesday morning saw the school going through its regular routine of scheduled work.

With Principal James Ferguson, getting a school down to work on the first day of the term is a hobby. He is proud of this accomplishment in the Jefferson Union high school. No better record could be made by any school, he says. He speaks in the highest terms of the efficiency of the faculty and the co-operation of the students, and says that without such efficiency and co-operation such prompt organization could not be effected.

"Getting down to business at once means cutting out waste of time," Mr. Ferguson says. "It is inexcusable to waste time, but more particularly the time of boys and girls who are in school to get an education that will fit them for life's work. We are teaching our boys and girls to be prompt in action and to be industrious, and we believe in teaching them by example. These habits are fundamental to success."

Anticipating an increased attendance, the high school board of education adopted the recommendation of Principal Ferguson that the school day be lengthened by one period. Hereafter all of the students will be in attendance from 9 o'clock until 4 in the afternoon, and each teacher will be assigned an additional class.

TRUSTEE LEWIS STARK PRESENTS RESIGNATION

Last Monday evening at 8 o'clock the Jefferson Union high school board of education met in special meeting to consider bids for the construction of a sidewalk in front of the high school building and for the construction of bleachers for the new athletic field. Chairman Bentley presided. There were also present Trustees Jensen, Gehringer and Stark, and Principal James Ferguson.

Mr. B. Milano was the lowest bidder in each case, and was awarded both contracts. His bid was $1,000 for the construction of the bleachers. For the sidewalk his itemized bids were as follows: Sidewalk, 4 inch, 12 cents a foot; 6 inch, 16 cents a foot; and curb 15 cents.

Trustee Lewis Stark presented his resignation as high school trustee. In accepting it the members of the board expressed their deep regret, and thanked Mr. Stark for the hearty and efficient co-operation he had given so generously in every matter that pertained to the welfare of the high school. Mr. Stark expressed his regret at not being able to continue as a member of the board, but assured the other members that his interest in the welfare of the school would continue.

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

To the church officers, treasurer, secretary and members:

At a meeting of the Congregational members last Sunday information was received that the Rev. Gisel had accepted a call to Fort Bragg, which necessitates Grace church extending a call to another candidate. The name of Mr. Chandler was put forward and after due consideration he seemed to be acceptable. It was therefore agreed to have a further meeting on Sunday, August 19, at 7:30 p. m., when all officers, trustees and members are requested to attend and confer with the Rev. Clyde Smith, executive secretary of the Church Extension Board, San Francisco Presbytery, who has kindly arranged to conduct this meeting, and who will also officiate at the usual 8 o'clock service. A hearty invitation is extended to the whole community of the Crocker Tract to come and hear this executive officer.

THREE MEET DEATH IN FIRE

Three persons were burned to death and three others injured when the house which they occupied in Redwood city was practically destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning. The dead are: Mrs. Lena Koff, wife of Sol Koff, prominent real estate operator of San Francisco; Howard Koff, their son, aged 7; and Miss Rose Heyman, a cousin of Mrs. Koff. The injured were Sol Koff, Elizabeth Keininger and Mrs. Jane Morrisete.

HERBERT HOOVER

Hoover Makes Plans Clear in Accepting Nomination

Among the thousands of people who journeyed to Palo Alto last Saturday to listen to the acceptance address of Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for president, were many Daly City residents, who, regardless of political affiliation, desired to pay respect to the first Californian ever nominated for the presidency.

There were many who made the journey to the home town of the presidential candidate who were unable to get inside the great bowl on the campus, but the thousands who were fortunate enough to do so were rewarded by a most interesting address and a scene that they will no doubt never forget.

The big bowl began filling up with visitors shortly after noon. By 2:30 in the afternoon, when the first of four bands paraded into the stadium, the vast oval held an immense crowd. The big bowl was a mass of color, the American flag being held by every spectator. Fireworks, band music and military drills by the American Legion fife and drum corps of Pasadena kept the visitors interested before the speeches began.

Shortly before 4 o'clock Governor Young stepped to the battery of microphones with the opening address. Following his address, the governor inroduced Senator Moses, appointed by the Republican National Convention in Kansas City to notify Hoover of his nomination. Senator Moses made a ten minute speech, and as he stepped from the stand to make way for the Republican nominee there was a roar of applause that lasted for several minutes.

"You bring, Mr. Chairman, formal notice of my nomination by the Republican party to the presidency of the United States," said Hoover as the cheering died away. "I accept. It is a great honor to be chosen for leadership in that party which has so largely made the history of our country in these last seventy years." He then launched directly into his acceptance speech, with its frank discussion of two problems that are expected to be vital issues in the campaign—agricultural relief and prohibition.

"The most urgent economic problem in our land today is agriculture," he declared. "It must be solved if we are to bring prosperity nad contentment to one-third of our people directly and all of our people indirectly. We have pledged ourselves to find a solution."

Hoover explained in detail his plan of farm relief. He seeks improvement in distribution methods, partially by an expansion of the co-operative plan, and pledges his "office and influence to give the farmer the full benefit of our historic tariff policy."

Improvement of transportation facilities is urged as another forward step, and he included in this development of inland waterways to serve particularly the Mid-Western states.

He cited adherence to the party pledge to create and build up with Federal finance "farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations, which will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses."

On the subject of prohibition, the Republican candidate said: "I do not favor the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. I stand for the efficient enforcement of the laws enacted thereunder. Whoever is chosen president has under his oath the solemn duty to pursue this course.

"Modification of the enforcement laws which would permit that which the constitution forbids is nullification. This the American people will not countenance. The Republican party denies the right of anyone to seek to destroy the purposes of the constitution by indirection."

The nominee urged a more spirited participation by women in politics.

On the subject of religious tolerance, he declared: "The glory of our American ideals is the right of every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience."

Speaking of corruption in government, Hoover urged a loftier idealism. He said: "Moral incompetency by those entrusted with government is a blighting wind upon private integrity. There must be no place for cynicism in the creed of America."

The Republican candidate praised the working out of the civil service plan, recited the benefts of the government's work for child welfare, pledged adherence to the Republican party's program of a high protective tariff, and promised to use his influence in amending the immigration quota law to prevent future hardship and injustice.

He closed his speech with a stirring plea for a higher concept of the spiritual obligations of government, declaring:

"The presidency is more than an administrative office. It must be the symbol of American ideals. The high and the lowly must be seen with the same eyes, met in the same spirti. It must be the instrument by which the national conscience is livened and it must, under the guidance of the Almighty, interpret and follow that conscience."

OPPOSES STATE LABEL PLAN

Opposition to the proposed state trade mark for California fruits and vegetables is expressed in resolutions adopted by the agricultural legislative committee, according to the announcement of Ralph H. Taylor, executive secretary of the committee. While favoring standardization, the proposal to enforce a trade mark is not regarded as practical or workable by the committee.

"To put the state in the advertising business," the resolution declares, "is a move which would prove wholly unsound."

SPRING VALLEY LAND MAY BE SET ASIDE AS A GAME REFUGE

Plans to make the San Mateo county properties of the Spring Valley Water Company, which will become the property of the city and county of San Francisco next year, a game refuge, were instituted last Monday at the meeting of the San Mateo county board of supervisors. Although no definite action was taken, the movement will be taken up with the proper authorities.

Jack Burke, San Mateo county fish and game warden, appeared before the board, explaining the matter and asking if it were within the power of the board to take action on the proposition. Warden Burke, a deputy of the state fish and game commission, was applauded for his measure and instructed that this matter was out of the jurisdiction of the board at the present time. It was explained that the state commission should institute the proceedings and it would be necessary to have the permission of the property owners before any action could be taken.

Warden Burke explained to the supervisors that with the transferring of the property many changes would probably be made in the operation of the project. At present, thousands of deer, along with birds and other animals, are living on the reservation, protected by the water company officials. This might be changed when the water company becomes the property of the municipality, Burke explained, saying that it might be the pleasure of politicians to go with their friends to the holdings and shoot the birds and animals that have for years been protected.

On several occasions, according to Burke, he has gone by the area and noticed scores of deer attracting the attention of local and outside motorists. This, he said, had drawn much comment from tourists all over the country.

When the city of San Francisco takes possession of the holdings, it will acquire 25,000 acres of the prettiest country in the bay region, with the hundreds of animals and birds that have lived on the reservation for years. Burke and his aides expect to take the measure up with state officials nad make the holding a state game refuge.

The action was indorsed by the supervisors, District Attorney Swart and others at the meeting.

REDISTRICTING PLAN IS DENIED BY COURT

The fight of Frederick Peterson and other Burlingame citizens to force the supervisors to redistrict San Mateo county met defeat in the District Court of Appeals last Tuesday, when that judicial body sustained the demurrer of the supervisors against a suit recently filed by Peterson and others in the Superior Court at Redwood City.

Peterson originally asked the supervisors to redistrict the county voluntarily. When this was refused he filed the suit to force redistricting, and a demurrer filed by District Attorney Franklin Swart on behalf of the supervisors was sustained.

Peterson appealed from the upholding of this demurrer on the grounds that the word "may" means "must," and that because the law provides that the supervisors "may redistrict," they are bound to do so when occasion demands. The District Court of Appeals decided that the word "may" can not be interpreted as mandatory, and that the supervisors are not compelled to redistrict unless they desire to do so.

TWENTY PROPOSALS ON NOVEMBER BALLOT

Twenty proposals have qualified to date for submission to the people on the November ballot, Secretary Frank C. Jordan announced last Monday, following the expiration of time for filing petitions launching initiative acts.

There are eleven senate constitutional amendments, five assembly amendments, two referendum—one legislative reapportionment and the other aimed at the Wagy truck tax—and two initiatives.

The initiative proposals include one to prohibit prize fighting in California, and another to halt the holding of rodeos.

To this long ballot at least one taxation amendment probably will be added by a special session of the legislature which Governor Young is expected to call for September.

CASSERLY FOR CONGRESS

BY MILLY BENNETT

A blue blood backed by dirt farmers, women, workmen and children.

Cecelia Cudahy Casserly is the lady. Peninsula society leader, daughter of "Mike" Cudahy of Chicago meat packing millions, she is running for Congress in the Eighth district.

No easy task looms for her.

Rather, a tough fight, and a mean one.

The Eighth, which reaches from rolling hills of San Mateo to the peaks of the Tehachapi, is staunchly Republican.

"An independent, unharnessed Democrat," Mrs. Casserly calls herself.

For ten years the constituents of the Eighth have sent Arthur Monroe Free of San Jose to Congress. This despite his anti-labor, anti-farmer, unprogressive record.

Mrs. Casserly's platform will be built on strong stones; farm loan assistance, highway development, child labor laws, port development in the peninsula counties, equal pay for men and women, the rights of workers to organize. All these she believes in.

Free's Record

Free voted against the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, against the child labor amendment, against the Howell-Barley railroad labor bill aimed at ending labor wars.

Mrs. Casserly is typically Californian in appearance and manner. A tall woman, deep chested, with skin burned by sun, clear blue eyes, handness to work hard, honesty and integrity, a responsibility for legislation in her own districts and for the women of the United States.

Mrs. Casserly was born in Milwaukee, Wis., November 22, 1873, the same year in which Al Smith was born.

Her father was Michael Cudahy. Shortly after the Chicago fire the family moved to that city. She was educated at the Sacred Heart convent and abroad until her marriage to John B. Casserly, son of Senator Eugene Casserly of California, in 1898.—From the San Francisco News of July 16, 1928. (Advertisement.)

CECELIA CUDAHY CASSERLY

some after a capable, self-reliant fashion. She talks directly, frankly, but tries to avoid personalities, doesn't like to attack her opponent.

"I've been tramping the roads," she tells, "talking to farmers, finding out their needs."

The wealthy candidate does not "play games." No golf, no polo, no tennis, no swimming. In other words no fashionable sports in the life of Mrs. Casserly.

"Walking is my only exercise."

Hiking in San Mateo, Santa Clara, San Luis Obispo, Monterey counties has shown the woman the road needs of the ranchers.

"Highway development is of great importance to the counties I'll represent in Congress—if I go," Mrs. Casserly declares. "The farmers need more avenues leading to industrial centers. I think of the farmer as a business man. I am in favor of government loans to farmers. I will work for a constructive form of farm assistance. And I differentiate between assistance and relief."

A port terminal is needed by peninsula farmers, she believes, and she pledges herself to "work for one, not just talk about it."

Known as Organizer

The organization ability of Mrs. Casserly is well known locally. During the war she headed the American Fund for French Wounded in this country. Later, when the United States entered the conflict, she directed and supervised the work of women workers in the Red Cross in San Francisco. In 1920 she was named chief of the Bureau of Women's Relations by the Secretary of War at a salary of $5,000 a year.

Veteran San Francisco telephone girls will remember Mrs. Casserly. During the phone strike of some years ago, when hundreds of strikers walked the street "broke," and in some cases homeless and hungry, she stepped in, organized a canteen and provided the young women with food and shelter.

The woman candidate has definite ideas about women in politics; particularly women of leisure.

"I believe," she asserts, "that since women have been given the franchise that it is their duty to accept the responsibility as well as the privilege. It seems to me that women are needed badly in Congress. A prominent politician said to me recently:

"'Now that women vote we expect them to take care of themselves.'

"I hate this sex business; but I do feel that the political needs of women can be brought out better by women than by men.

"Women in industry and government service are gladly to have the support of women in Congress. I will fight for equal pay for equal work for women.

"Politics, I believe, is the particular duty of women of leisure. A great many of my friends have too much leisure that is not occupied with constructive work."

Mrs. Casserly hopes to serve her constituents, should she be sent to Congress, as they wish to be served, rather than press her own opinions or plans upon them.

Music is Mrs. Casserly's recreation. She is a talented performer on the piano and harp. She is the mother of four grown children; two sons and two daughters. Her son, Michael, recently licensed a pilot at Boston airport, will aid his mother in her campaign.

"I'll stump by air," Mrs. Casserly laughs, "if I qualify at the primaries. Michael says he'll pilot me."

Mrs. Casserly organized the Philharmonic Society of San Mateo County in 1925. Stimulated by the woman's efforts, citizens of the county voted a theatre for Hillsborough, completed recently, which houses visiting orchestras.

Three Principles

Three principles Mrs. Casserly will carry to Congress if she goes; willing-

BIG EXPOSITION IS UNDER WAY AT LONG BEACH

Bathed in the glorious sunshine of California by day, and converted into a virtual fairyland of a thousand colors by night, the Pacific Southwest Exposition at Long Beach, California, is daily attracting thousands from over all the United States, who marvel at the Tunisian city, surrounded on three sides by the blue Pacific, and which has risen out of the sand strip in the center of Long Beach harbor.

Dark eyed Spanish beauties, picturesque Arabs, Gypsy musicians, Russians from the shores of the Volga, natives of a hundred different nations, all lend to the Exposition that romance which yearly lures thousands of tourists to the various oasis of Northern Africa.

There has not been a dull moment at the huge international fair since Governor C. C. Young and his official party passed through the portals of the walled-city on a Friday noon, and the Exposition was declared formally opened.

It is an impossibility to say just which of the fifty palaces is attracting the largest crowds. Each comes in for its share. Likewise, it is difficult to say just which booth is proving most attractive. The San Francisco display in the main exhibit palace, and the United States Forest Service display in the California Palace, are exciting keen intedest.

There are now ninety-eight telephone central offices in the city of Chicago.

It doesn't pay to be fussy about one's traffic rights with a 10-ton truck on the port bow.

THE RETURN OF ANTHONY TRENT

By WYNDHAM MARTYN

Copyright by Barse & Hopkins WNU Service

CHAPTER VIII

Pierre Redlich Meets a Master

Mr. Yeatman was consulting the barometer as Trent passed him in the outer hall. The glass was falling.

"Blowing up for a storm," said Trent, reading the instrument.

"I much fear it," returned the other.

"Why should a storm bother you?" Trent demanded.

"I get a headache when thunder comes."

Pierre Redlich was not in a mood to talk. His head already ached from his experiences of last night. The barometer reading was most unsatisfactory. If a storm sprang up his steamer dare not lie in close to the shore; also he would not be able to get to her with his little launch.

He did not like to think about last night. Redlich was convinced that it was some member of the gang controlled by the "Countess" who had rescued her. It was disturbing to know that men as brave and determined as he were also after the Strauss diamonds and the Fisher pearls, and already suspected him of a similar errand. How would they set about the task?

He had a list of the invited guests for tonight's dance. It was not a complete one. Some of the more important visitors had permission to bring with them certain of their own house guests. Of these added names he nor his employers had any knowledge. Such blanket invitations could be turned to dangerous uses.

Mademoiselle Dupin's former associates had been of the kind who could pass in any society. It was such a gang on the Riviera he remembered. They had not been crooks who masqueraded as men and women of position; they had been men and women of birth and breeding who had elected to follow criminal paths. A dangerous set, and difficult to unmask.

He did not think anyone else would choose the marine path to safety. They would work, he supposed, with high-powered automobiles. They would be many, and he but one. Yet he had the tremendous advantage of being unsuspected and free of the house. His actual zone of danger was that which lay between the mansion and the edge of the sea. It was exactly a quarter of a mile. He would need to take five hundred paces in the dark with his precious loot.

There was a man who watched for his signals on the steamer who could be useful in an emergency. He was a sailor and as strong and active as a gorilla. But Pierre had found that participation in a crime of this sort invariably led to a demand for too large a division of the spoils.

All the help that Redlich needed was an armed escort from the house to the boat. The steamer was undermanned. The fewer the crew the less danger. Once at sea Redlich would take his spell with the rest.

So far only Gimbert had seen his launch; and he had explained it satisfactorily. It was a nine-foot boat fitted with one of the removable engines which may be affixed to any small boat. In the surf it would have little chance, but the big sailor would be waiting just outside the surf line to pick him up.

When he saw Anthony Trent coming toward him he assumed his squarest and most policeman-like pose.

"The glass is going up," said Trent. "I don't think we shall have a storm tonight. I'm mighty glad of it. I'm afraid of lightning. I don't suppose a bold accountant like you is afraid of anything, eh?"

"I fear only dyspepsia," Redlich said. He turned away to greet Mr. Gimbert.

"Better tuck all your valuables away carefully," said the indiscreet old man. "We may have a visitation tonight."

Trent noticed that Redlich found it difficult to answer.

"I do not understand," he said at last.

"We think," Gimbert said, "that tonight's the night. I'm laying for 'em. Grant wanted me to sleep all the afternoon so as to be ready to keep watch when the ladies have gone to bed and the burglars get busy. I don't have to have more than four hours' sleep any night."

"This may be very serious," Mr. Yeatman remarked.

"Nothing to it," Trent declared. "I'm going to have a swim while the tide's right."

He strolled away with elaborate unconcern.

"He don't know that I know you're a detective," Gimbert remarked. "What I want to do is to help you any way I can. Do these fellows hunt in couples?"

"They have various methods. Always they employ a man outside who watches. Sometimes two men to guard their getaway."

"That's Trent's job to look after them. Grant bluffed him into it."

"Explain, if you please," Mr. Yeatman spoke very deliberately.

Gimbert told him of the talk at luncheon.

It was all vastly disturbing to Pierre Redlich. He could send this old man on a wild goose chase as he had, last night, sent the butler. But to have this active younger man prowling around the premises promised him a great deal of trouble. He cursed Mademoiselle Dupin under his breath. If he had foregone his boasting and put all thought of her aside he might by now be steaming south to safety.

He was walking slowly past the garage when Trent's big car backed out.

"Do you not swim here?" Redlich asked.

"Sure," Trent grinned amiably. "I'm going to get a new bathing suit first at Asbury. Want to come along?"

"I have my work," Yeatman answered.

He verified Trent's words when, an hour later, he walked down to the Grant bathing pavilion at the end of the garden. Anthony Trent was disporting himself in the water and his bathing suit was new. Redlich watched his antics scornfully. He himself had swum professionally, and he was looking at a man who dared not go out of his depth.

"A fierce undertow," Trent shouted.

Pierre Redlich grunted some reply and then turned toward the house. He would have been surprised to see what a changed swimmer Trent became when he found himself alone. He swam out a hundred yards and then dived to the bottom. A score of times he dived in as many different spots. When he returned, weary, to the hot sands, he had satisfied himself that a boat drawing fifteen feet of water would have no difficulty in coming within twenty yards of the shore.

In the house Thorpe and his staff were making elaborate preparations for the entertainment. Only old Gimbert was to be seen. Other men were lying in hammocks, resting. The ladies had gone to their rooms.

In his room, as he dressed for dinner, Trent took out the sheaf of notes Sutton had written for him. One seemed to give him especial pleasure, and he put it in his pocket.

None saw him go out of a side door onto the terrace. From the center of a clump of rhododendrons where he was completely hidden from the house and unobserved from the gardens, now bare of workers, he could just see the open window of Grant's room through the leaves. He wrapped the piece of paper around a pebble, tying it with common white string, and hurled it with perfect aim. It chanced to fall noiselessly on Grant's bed.

Payson Grant saw it just as he was ready to go downstairs.

The sight of it robbed him of the pleasant confidence he had tried so hard to cultivate. Without touching the thing, he knew from whom it was. He could hardly bear to pick it up.

"No matter how you protect yourself, you are not safe from me. I shall choose my moment and strike. It may be tonight. I may be behind any door you open or around the first corner you turn.

"F. W. S."

Natica looked up crossly as he burst into her room. Her maid was frightened at the wild gestures with which he ordered her to go.

"Look at this," he said, his hand shaking. "It was on my bed. Some one must have thrown it through the window."

"Tell Regan to search the grounds at once," she commanded. "Have you done so?"

"I couldn't think of anything but this," he confessed. "I'm shot to bits. Frank's somewhere quite near. He's laughing at us. He says I can't protect myself from him, and it looks like it. I wish I'd never put up such a game on him."

"Don't be silly," she said sharply. "You put up no game, as you call it. He was proved guilty and sentenced. Nothing can be brought against us unless you lose control of yourself. Have you thought what might happen if you were overheard talking like that? Pull yourself together. One of us must be down to receive these people. Shall I tell them my husband has a nervous headache?" Her tone was biting.

Grant was not without his share of normal courage. But he had a vivid imagination and was susceptible to suggested terrors. The unknown had always frightened him. Had he known that around some definite corner Sutton stood, or that behind a designated door he would find him, he would have nerved himself to the encounter. But not to know behind which door or at which corner, provoked in him fears that Natica could not comprehend. She was of a direct, uncompromising materialistic nature.

"I'll go down," he said sullenly, "and I hope to God he's there so it can end one way or another. I'm armed, too."

Almost a feeling of despair seized his wife. She would not admit that her first husband had been unjustly condemned. She had refused to be a party to Grant's forgeries, but she had not refused to benefit from them. Her whole energies were bent on social success, and any scandal such as the shooting of Sutton or Grant would render them null. She aimed at a set that would have none of these sensational methods. She was one of those women who asserted that hell came here on earth. She began to be afraid her theological judgments were true. Everything seemed to be going wrong.

Her main reason for disbelieving that Sutton was not looking for her husband was due to the knowledge of his chivalrous nature. He had never shown any disposition to vengeance. She had often been angered at it. He had been too soft-hearted. Essentially he was not a man to bear long grudges. But she could not tell to what a mood his brooding over the outcome of the trial had brought him. If his thoughts were directed toward avenging himself, assuredly Payson would be the victim. Her husband had more right than she accorded him for being fearful.

Before going downstairs she glanced at herself in a mirror.

"I look fifty!" she cried.

But she did not show the strain under which she labored at the very successful dinner. Nor did her husband. She could guess from the occasional slurs in his speech to what he owed his courage.

At a certain alcoholic pressure Payson was highly diverting. Frank Sutton was at his worst at a function such as this. He was a man's man, happier at camp-fire conversation than among such a company as was gathered here. If Payson could keep his entertaining chatter going it might win them an invitation to Lakewood. All steps in the great game.

Later in the evening Natica saw that Anthony Trent was Mrs. Bixel's entertainer.

"Swithin dined with us a few days ago," Mrs. Bixel said, "and couldn't quite understand why you were here."

"Polo, mainly," he told her.

"Do you know," she said, "you have quite a remarkable influence over Swithin. I came here just to find out why, although George thinks he persuaded me to pay a business obligation."

"What have you found out?" he asked.

"I think the reason is that you are strong and have a certain element of ruthlessness about you."

"That's the character that might belong to any successful man of business."

"Like my husband, for instance," she laughed. "I suppose that's true. I didn't mean exactly that type. I think you would look well in those swashbuckling clothes men wore in Tudor times. I am giving a costume ball next month. I'll invite you only if you promise to wear a plumed hat and sword."

Natica Grant would have given a great deal for such an opportunity, but Trent was not as gratified as he pretended to be.

Flappers Succumb to Lure of Camel Riding

Morocco means camels and sheiks to the shoals of American schoolgirls who invade the country each autumn chaperoned by Paris finishing school teachers. Marrakech sees most of them, because they find the herds there which make camel rides possible. No debutante considers her tour complete until she has been camel riding. Sheiks are harder to find, the type being a product of the desert interiors.

The schoolgirls visit Morocco early in the fall, at the Christmas holiday or late in the spring. Marrakech the Red, under the shadows of the high Atlas, is the only city where camels in numbers may be obtained, and so the girls do most of their camel riding there. Only the freight-carrying type of animal is available. There are no swift "ships of the desert" for the young tourists. But that does not detract from the enjoyment of the flappers, to whom any camel is a camel.—London Daily Mail.

HONORING SCHUBERT

In commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Franz Schubert, "greatest song writer of all time," more than 150,000 members of choral societies from all over the world gathered in his beloved Vienna to sing his matchless melodies and honor his genius. The American delegation numbered more than 3,000.

Vienna's famous concert hall in the Prater, seating 70,000 persons, was unable to hold one-third of the auditors, so the crowds were shifted at intervals, as well as the performers, and concerts were continuous for four days. The city was crowded to overflowing and 60,000 beds were lent by Poland, while hundreds of locomotives and passenger coaches were drawn from that country and Germany to handle the throngs of visitors.

All this in honor of a composer whose short life of 31 years was spent in poverty, and whose property at his death was officially appraised at the equivalent of about ten dollars.

Schubert left to posterity more than 600 songs, 10 symphonies, 24 sonatas, 18 dramatic pieces, 8 sacred compositions and many other miscellaneous works, all written during a period of about 18 years, beginning when he was 13 years of age. Of all his works, the immortal "Serenade" is the most widely known.

1542 electric ranges just installed in our customers' homes

The Electric Range gives beauty, cleanliness and perfect baking to women who love modern methods.

That is the reason why 1542 of our customers installed Electric Ranges in their homes from May 1st to June 23rd.

The Electric Range has white porcelain enamel that makes kitchens attractive. It bakes perfectly. And it does it automatically. The oven heats up to 400 degrees in 9 to 11 minutes —as fast as one can mix biscuits. The open coil cooking elements are now made smaller to fit your pans. Heat that was formerly wasted goes to work. Food cooks faster — less electricity is used.

While you're downtown, stop in and see the new Electric Ranges.

SOVIET RAILROADING

An amazing state of affairs in connection with the government-operated railroads of Russia was disclosed by a recent investigation of the appalling number of accidents occurring last year, which totalled 14,500 as against 6,000 in 1913.

On one line 500 miles long there were sixty-one accidents in 1927, in which sixty persons were killed and 800 seriously injured. More than 80 per cent of accidents on Soviet railroads were caused by the negligence of train crews or of other employees.

Four persons were killed and sixteen injured in a collision which occurred when the engineer and fireman were playing cards with the train running full speed. A drunken station master deliberately shunted one train into another just to see "how much of a collision it would be." Several trains failed to reach their destinations because they were sent hundreds of miles off their course by switchmen for a joke.

These findings of a Soviet investigating commission were reported by the International News Service as an illustration of the demoralization which exists in Russia under the present Communistic regime.

PRISON CONTESTS

Sponsored by the American Mothers, contests among the prisons of the country have been conducted for some time, with the laudable purpose of leading prisoners to a more social outlook upon life.

Among the activities for which prizes are given are athletics, the growing of prison flower gardens, the building up of prison libraries, the best prison magazine, excellence of prison band musicians, training of practical nurses among inmates, and suggesting plans for placing prisoners in suitable employment after their release.

Prizes are given for each of these activities, while the Bennett cup, donated by Mrs. Mary Bennett Little, of Wadesboro, N. C., in memory of her father, is awarded to the prison making the highest average score in all seven contests. This cup is now held by the Federal prison at McNeill Island, Washington. The next awards will be made on Armistice day.

While some believe that there is at present a tendency to coddle prisoners too much, there is no doubt that such competitions as those promoted by the War Mothers are of value in restoring to many convicts a sense of pride and a renewal of self-respect.

ESKIMO PROGRESS

Steadily, though sometimes very slowly, civilization is being extended to remote portions of the earth. Within recent years much educational progress has been made among the Eskimos of Alaska, where eighty American school teachers are scattered along the shores of Bering Sea and Arctic Ocean, serving a native population of about 12,000.

In these far northern regions usually only one ship a year brings these people into personal contact with the United States, when supplies are delivered and teachers are exchanged. The U. S. S. Boxer is now on the way to Alaska, carrying school supplies, reading matter, mail and radio sets.

According to the Bureau of Education, the Eskimos are now prosperous and are taking to modern ways. Real houses, built under the supervision of American teachers, are replacing the dirty igloos which were formerly the sole habitation of the natives.

Now the radio is bringing them campaign oratory, jazz music and grand opera. Being an Eskimo is not such a drab existence as it once was.

THE DESTRUCTIVE RAT

Of all the pests which infest the world, the rat is undeniably one of the worst. So great has the menace of rats become that an international association for their extermination has been organized.

Not only do rats destroy millions of dollars worth of farm products every year, but they are a menace to health through the fleas which infest them and spread diseases of various kinds, such as bubonic plague, trichinosis and hydrophobia.

It is said that one couple of gray rats will produce 800 to 900 offspring in a year, as the young become adults in four months. If all were able to find food and shelter it can readily be seen that they would ultimately overrun a community.

The program recommended for combatting rats includes the building of rat-proof structures, the cutting off of their food supply and the poisoning of those which survive other preventive measures.

WASTE IN ADVERTISING

This is an age of advertising. Business could not get along without it. Yet many merchants waste a large share of the money they think they are spending for advertising and wonder why they do not get better results.

Women do most of the buying for the home. Now, did you ever see a woman go looking over the billboards, or reading the movie screen advertisements in order to make up her mind what or where to buy? Does she get her shopping information from a theatre program or a telephone directory? Not on your life.

Outside of the store itself, the best and almost the only way to attract a prospective customer's attention to what you have to sell is through the newspaper that goes into the home. The store that advertises adequately and persistently in its local newspapers has no need to waste money on the other and inferior mediums mentioned.

WHAT KILLED IDA?

When Ida, a famous ostrich of the London Zoo, passed away some time ago, to the grief of all who knew her, there was much speculation at the cause of her untimely death. To try to determine the matter, a post-mortem examination was held, according to the Associated Press, which reports that the following assortment of material was found in her ample gizzard: Two women's handkerchiefs, a man's handkerchief, three gloves, three feet of cord, an empty film spool, four half-pennies, an eight-inch lead pencil, a four-inch nail, two farthings and a French coin, part of a celluloid comb, part of a rolled gold necklace, a collar button, a bicycle tire valve, a brass winding key for an alarm clock, a dozen bits of wire, metal staples, screws, small nails, and copper rivets, glove fastener and a piece of wood four inches long.

The dispatch did not disclose just what the verdict was, but a mere layman might venture the thought that Ida had suffered from something akin to indigestion.

Honoring the birth in Geneva, Switzerland, of Henri Dumont, founder of the Red Cross, the American Red Cross in Washington extended its vocal felicitations to the international headquarters in Geneve by telephone upon the opening of translantic telephone service between this continent and the Swiss Republic, according to advices received by The Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

REVISION OF BANK TAXES

As was indicated several days ago, a special session of the State Legislature to consider proposed constitutional amendments bearing upon bank taxation will be called by Gov. C. C. Young for September 4.

This is in accord with the recommendation of the California State tax commission, which long has been investigating the situation created by recent Federal and State court decisions upon the question of taxing national banks and "in tangible securities."

Abolition of the present franchise tax and spbstitution of a tax on net income of certain business corporations is one of the recommendations of the commission: A fixed tax on "intangibles" also is urged.

It is expected that Governor Young's proclamation will be issued within a day or two calling the special session.

RADIOPHONE $200,000 ORDER

An advertising order of $200,000 to be spent in newspapers throughout the United States was sent to New York recently by radio telephone form London. The New York representative of the India Tea Growers' Association was informed to proceed with plans to spend this sum of money in American newspapers this year to popularize India tea.

HICKEY WINS OUT ON BOULEVARD PLAN

Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, chairman of the two-counties highway board, won San Francisco's approval of his plan for the extension of Junipero Serra boulevard down the peninsula to the northern limits of Burlingame.

By convincing arguments and presentation of facts showing comparative assessed valuation of the two counties, Hickey won by a 11 to 3 vote of the San Francisco supervisors on a plan of 85 per cent of the cost of the highway to be borne by San Francisco, and 15 per cent by San Mateo county. This plan had previously been ratified by the San Mateo county board of supervisors.

This means another fine outlet for traffic down the peninsula, and is one of the many good road projects in which Supervisor Hickey has played a very important part.

SCENIC ATTRACTIONS RIGHT AT OUR DOOR

San Mateo county affords some of the most scenic and beautiful trips in the entire San Francisco Bay section, according to L. L. Norris, manager of the touring department of the National Automobile Club.

One of the trips, he declares, which offers a diversity of scenery difficult to equal, is to leave the main highway just north of Mountain View and to continue over paved roads to Los Altos. Incidentally, this part of the trip and the next few miles is in Santa Clara county.

Just after leaving Los Altos, a good dirt and gravel road branches to the right, passing numerous magnificent estates, summer homes, prosperous fruit orchards, and the homes of many wealthy San Franciscans. This is known as the Alpine Creek road.

The road ascends over easy grades through the foothills for three miles, at which point a steady up-grade, running from 12 to 14 per cent, is encountered for three miles. At the summit are a number of dairy farms and stock ranches, also orchards of apples, pears, peaches, apricots, plums and prunes. Oats, barley, beans and potatoes are also raised in this section.

Aftre crossing the Sierra Morena range, forming a fertile and picturesque watershed, the road drops over a rapid descent, following Alpine Creek. Wild flowers abound in this section and their coloring seems far more vivid than is ordinarily found. The poppies are almost blood red, the lupin of the deepest blue, purple and gorgeous yellow, and there are many other unnamed varieties adorning the hillsides.

After reaching the bottom of the grade, the motorist may either turn right to La Honda or continue to the westward through San Mateo County Memorial Park, thence along Pescadero Creek into Pescadero. If time permits, it is recommended that the Pescadero trip be taken, for, while there is only a fair dirt road, San Mateo County Memorial Park contains one of the finest redwood groves in this section of the state. Ferns and bracken grow from one to five feet high. There are many beautiful picnicking spots along the creek, also attractive places where one may camp by paying a nominal fee.

The return trip may either be made via the Coast route from Pescadero to San Gregorio, Half Moon Bay and San Francisco, all in good condition, or continue along the coast to San Gregorio, and from that point across to La Honda over excellent paved road, thence to the Skyline boulevard and into San Francisco. The latter route affords excellent roads and in interesting trip.

GAS EXETENSION WILL RUN TO BELVEDERE AND TIBURON

When the Northwestern Pacific signed up, not long ago, to use gas in its plant and shops at Tiburon, it gave the Pacific Gas and Electric opportunity to extend gas mains to serve Belvedere, Tiburon and Corinthian Island. The work, which has just been ordered, calls for the laying of more than ten miles of pipe.

Gas will be supplied from the company's transmission line on the State Highway between San Rafael and Sausalito, and connections will be made on the Mill Valley side of the Corte Madera grade.

The extention will cost the company about $68,000 and will add, it is estimated, 341 domestic and 7 commercial consumers to the number of P. G. and E. customers. Gas for Tiburon, Belvedere and Corinthian Island will be made in the big generating plant in San Rafael, supply point for the high pressure, long-distance transmission line that runs north and south, serving much of Marin and Sonoma counties.

SIDELIGHTS

Anyway Tunney has a more active conscience than some of our other great and near-great. He does not smoke, but was offered $10,000 by a manufacturer to sign an advertisement saying: "This must be a good cigarette because all my friends use it." The champion refused to allow his name to be used.

Cardinal Lucon, archbishop of Rheims, aged 86, recently flew over the city and viewed his famous cathedral from the air. Afterward he said: "I would not have risked it before the war. People would have gossiped."

O. O. McIntyre, who records interesting bits of Broadway gossip, believes he has found New York's best sport. A fellow who must pay $400 a week alimony sends the check each Saturday in a box of roses.

Monkeys figured in two recent court cases. In New York former governor Miller secured acquittal of a client who shot a monkey. In Colorado Springs a jury awarded Malcolm McConnell $10,000 damages against a hotel man, whose monkey had bitten McConnell's nose.

The story is told of a recent graduate, highly impressed with his own importance, who asked his prospective employer, "Will you pay me what I am worth?" The boss man generously replied. "I'll do better than that; I'll give you a small salary to start with."

Candidate Hoover held in his arms but refused to kiss a Nevada baby, saying, "I will kiss no babies for publication." Candidate Smith refused to be photographed laying bricks, saying, "I can't lay bricks, and any bricklayer who saw it would know I couldn't. That's a baloney picture and I'm not going to stand for any baloney pictures in this campaign."

Brule would fit nicely into the headlines if anything important ever happened there.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

State Senator Thomas Ingram, who represented the Third Senatorial District, comprising Nevada, Placer, El Dorado, Sierra and Plumas counties, in the California Legislature during the past 12 years, died at his home in Grass Valley last week.

Airplane insurance policies covering fire, burglary, theft liability and accidents may be written by California insurance companies under existing State law. Atty. Gen. U. S. Webb advised Charles R. Detrick a few days ago that aircraft insurance may be handled along these lines until such time as the State Legislature sees fit to pass special insurance legislation dealing with the aviation industry.

Barber shops in California must be sanitary or the State board of barber examiners will close them. The total of 166 shops were closed temporarily during the year ended June 30, 1928, quoting figures contained in the board's first annual report to Governor C. C. Young. Barbers must also be cleanly and free from diseases and contagious infection and non-drug users, the board holds. There were 402 barbers refused licenses to operate during the year, the report stated.

Dozens of tax suits aggregating millions of dollars in worth to the State as revenue from banks probably will be withdrawn as the result of the special session of the 1927 Legislature which Governor Young is expected to summon not later than early in September to pass on the California Tax Commission's recommendations for a constitutional amendment legalizing bank taxes.

Certification of 109,990 signatures on anti-prize initiative petitions was announced last week by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan. Though the measure to repeal the California prize fight law qualified for a place on the November election ballot more than a week ago, petitions from both Northern and Southern California have continued pouring into the Capitol. Receipt of petitions was announced from Nevada, San Diego, Colusa, Monterey, Sacramento and Alameda counties, the last named alone filing 11,384 names.

Three eras of California history will have parts in Monterey's third annual Serra Pilgrimage Fiesta, August 23-26. Days of the Dons who founded Monterey in 1770 will be portrayed in a pageant by Perry Newberry, Carmel author, and Monsignor Ramon Mostres, curator and pastor of the Monterey and Carmel Missions. Life during the 30 years of Mexican occupation will be typified by a bull fight, with picadors, toreadors, and a real bull. At balls to be staged each night during the fiesta, the third or American period will be commemorated when costumed pioneers, Mexican and Spaniards unite in celebrating history.

Covering a distance of twice around the world and behind schedule only twice is the record announced a few days ago by Western Air Express, Inc., for its huge 12-passenger planes being operated in daily service between Los Angeles, Oakland and San Francisco. The service was established May 26 last. Since then, the company reports, the planes have covered 50,000 flying miles at an average speed of 123 miles per hour. The air distance between Los Angeles and San Francisco is 365 miles. The trip has been made daily in three hours. Twice have planes arrived late, once by three minutes and again by eight minutes. On the the other hand, one plane made the trip in 2 hours, 28 minutes.

California's banking system, with total resources of $1,851,998,023 as of June 30, ranks sixth among the State systems of the United States, according to figures compiled by the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks. Exceeding California in resources are New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio. Due to the nationalization of the Bank of Italy and the Pacific Southwest Bank within the last two years, there has been a decrease in the total resources of State banks in California. However, this loss in resources is being rapidly overcome by the growth of State banks.

Wasted fruit and vegetable crops of California would be used to operate automobiles up and down the highways and byways, if Dr. Henry Arnstein, noted chemical engineer, had his way. Dr. Arnstein declared in San Francisco last week it is an economic crime to allow fruits to rot on the trees and vines because of an overstocked market. Raisins, peaches, prunes, apricots, cereals need never go to waste and the production may be steadily increased if the surplus food is scientifically and chemically changed into alcohol and by-products. He estimated that the 150,000 tons of surplus raisins in California would make 12,600,000 gallons of alcohol, besides profitable by-products.

The old West is gone indeed. An initiative measure which would virtually take the spurs off bronco busters' boots was qualified last week for the November election ballot. The initiative, which positively forbids the use of spurs to make animals buck, won a place on the ballot with 105,979 petition signatures, 14,450 more than were needed. In addition to its provisions against the use of spurs, the iniative, sponsored by the Anti Rodeo Cruelty Association, would prohibit "bulldogging," wild animals racing and similar events of Wild West roundup programs.

MANAGER KANE'S CAREER VARIED

Pilot Was Jockey, Singer and Saxophone Player.

Eddie Kane, who handles the business affairs of the very good little lightweight champion, Sammy Mandell, has been, at various times in his career, a jockey, a singer and hoofer, a fancy billiard crack and a saxophone player of great skill.

When he was in England several years ago he was given entree to another racket but, be it said in justice to him, he didn't accept.

Kane was enjoying a sociable evening in the Savoy hotel bar with a party of friends and they were joined by another group which included a rather stunning woman.

The lady took a liking to Kane and proceeded to engage him in heavy conversation, which was not to his liking. He kept one ear on the conversation of the others and yessed her.

She asked him if he knew a number of persons in Chicago and New York and after he had told her that he knew each one of them well she told him quietly:

"You come with us tonight. We know a good spot you're in. The first glance I took at you I spotted you as a dip."

Kane tells a story about the first time he took Sammy Mandell out on the road. They went to a swell hotel and Sammy tried out a new fancy shower, but when he finished he couldn't find any towels on the rack so he picked up the bath mat which was folded on the side of the tub. He gave himself a brisk rub and then shouted out to Kane:

"Gee, these towels are stiff. They're great for a rubdown but I can't get it in my ears."

Stretch of Consecutive .300 Seasons for Cobb

If Ty Cobb bats .300 this season (and one of the safest predictions in baseball that we know of is that he will) his stretch of consecutive .300 seasons will reach 23. No other player, living or dead, ever had more than 20 seasons of .300 clubbing in his record.

Adrian C. Anson, the immortal captain of the Chicagos, had averages of .300 or better for the first 20 seasons of his career.

Anson played major league ball from 1871 to 1897 inclusive, a stretch of 27 seasons.

Cobb is playing his twenty-fourth season in the American league. If he sticks to his present plans he will not equal Anson's record of 27 seasons. Cobb intends to make this his last year. He is positive that he will retire at the end of the season. If he does change his mind and consent to try another season, 1929 will certainly see his retirement to private life.

While Anson played 27 years, Cobb has played more games than Anson, or any other man for that matter. In the day when Anson was a great slugger the seasons did not carry 154-game schedules.

Where Bobby's Strength Lies in Game of Golf

Professional golfers say what makes Bobby Jones a superman on the links is not so much the drives and iron shots, of which a lot has been written, as it is his skill within 20 feet of the green.

The shot which even the expert dreads is the short approach from the edge of matted grass or the short pitch from wet sand. These shots are poison to most players, but pie to Bobby. Put him within 20 feet of the green and, no matter what the lie may be, the chances are that he will toss the ball near the cup and hole his putt. That's golf!

Fred Mitchell Renamed as Head Baseball Coach

The announcement of the reappointment of Fred Mitchell as head baseball coach is made by the Harvard Athletic association. It was said that Mitchell has signed a contract which will not expire until 1931.

Mitchell first took charge of Harvard baseball in 1916. Harvard dropped the game when the war broke out in 1917 and Mitchell did not return to Cambridge until 1924, when he served as pitching coach. He had been head coach since 1926.

Billy Southworth, former major leaguer with the Rochester Internationals, is showing no signs of losing his batting power. He's well above the .340 mark.

A NEW ANIMAL

"I've just arrived at the zoo," said the Black-Faced Brocket. "They say that they're glad to have me here."

"I'm glad to see you and hope we'll become friends," said the Molucca Deer.

"Are we going to be near together, in near-by yards?" asked the Black-Faced Brocket.

"I imagine so," said the Molucca Deer. "You have been put there and unless it doesn't suit you, they will keep you there."

"Well, I'll be glad to stay quiet for a time. I'm so tired of traveling. Gracious, but I've had a long trip," said the Black-Faced Brocket.

"You'll have something to tell the visitors," said the Molucca Deer.

"Visitors? I haven't asked anyone to visit me."

"They come of their own accord. They like to see the new animals and to learn about them. The keeper will tell about you."

"I'm from Mexico, and my name is the Black-Faced Brocket," the new animal said.

"I'm a deer, of course you knew that. My name would hardly tell you much of anything—that is, it might, and it might not.

"I'm Rather a Stranger."

"To be sure it tells you something, but not all."

"I'd know you were a deer all right," said the Molucca Deer.

"A name never tells everything, does it?" asked the Black-Faced Brocket.

"No," said the Molucca Deer, "you can hardly expect it to do so, for if it did there would be no use in having histories and live stories and such things written."

"I'm smaller than a Sinaloa White-Tailed Deer, and you know they're not so big."

"They're not, that's right," said the Molucca Deer.

"As for horns—well, my poor little antlers are hardly worth speaking about, they're so small.

"But I'm rather a stranger to the zoos and the people around don't know me so well, and maybe they won't care if I am not the largest and most wonderful deer in the world."

"They most certainly won't care," said the Molucca Deer, "for they have been very anxious for you to come, and now you're here, they're delighted to see you."

"Ah, that does my black-faced brocket heart good to hear," said the deer, "and I hope they will keep on liking me even if my antlers don't grow any more, which they won't, because they can't.

"I flatter myself when I call them antlers for they are really little more than spikes and not very big spikes at that, but still I'm a new kind to them in the zoo so they won't care if I haven't antlers such as those around me seem to have."

"They won't mind."

A Whispering Game

The players in this game sit in a circle. The first starts the game by asking in a whisper a question of his neighbor. A simple question will serve quite well, such as, "Do you like ice cream?" This question is now claimed by the second player, who must remember it to the end of the game. She will probably answer, "Yes, at all times," and this answer belongs to the first player, and must be remembered by him, the question and answer thus changing owners, as it were.

The second player then asks his neighbor a question, taking care to remember the answer, and it will belong to him, and the question becomes the possession of the answer giver. And so the game goes on until all have been questioned, and have given an answer, and then at the end each gives his question and answer, and the most amusing mixtures will be found to have occurred.

Paper Made From Straw

Dr. Umberto Pomilio, a noted Italian chemist and inventor, is reported, after 16 years of labor, to have perfected a process of making paper pulp from straw, says Thrift Magazine.

Italy, on account of its lack of forest resources, is one of the first countries to be driven to the extremity of seeking a paper pulp substitute for pulp made from soft wood. If it is found that straw offers a substitute for wood the importance and value of this Italian process may be felt even in America, where there has long been a serious and rapidly increasing shortage in the soft wood suitable for making newsprint paper.

What is the range that Nature gives her own?
With frost or fire she stays their flying feet,
And holding each within its native zone:
The pine its love, the palm, shall never meet:
Nowhere do roses bloom from field of ice,
Nowhere in valleys blooms the edelweiss.—Edith Thomas.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Succulent salads, juicy fine flavored fruits and greens of various kinds are the foods that appeal to the appetite during the warm days.

Lettuce With Columbia Dressing. — Prepare lettuce by washing and chilling well in cold water, then drain and shake dry in a cloth. Arrange the lettuce in the salad bowl in its original shape and pour over a dressing made as follows: Mix one teaspoonful of salt, one of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of worcestershire sauce, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and six tablespoonfuls of olive oil, in a small glass jar. Set in a cold place and shake thoroughly before using.

Cheese Sandwiches.—Cut stale bread in one-fourth-inch slices, remove the crusts and cut in rectangular pieces. Cut mild cheese in slices of the same size as the bread and sprinkle with salt and cayenne. Put a slice of cheese between each two slices of bread and fry in a small amount of butter until well browned on both sides.

Pear and Tomato Salad.—Peel and cut into quarters one or two each of pears and tomatoes. Arrange them in alternate quarters on a bed of lettuce and serve with a snappy French dressing.

Cream Scones.—Mix and sift two cupfuls of flour with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two teaspoonfuls of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Rub into the dry mixture four tablespoonfuls of butter, then add two beaten eggs, reserving a tablespoonful in the bowl. Add one-third of a cupful of cream and mix, toss on a floured board and roll out. Cut in squares or diamonds, brush with the egg and sprinkle with a little sugar. Bake in a hot oven fifteen minutes.

The Common Potato.

When cooking potatoes for salad, cook them with the skins on, cool, and peel then cut up as usual. Remember that a good potato salad must stand several hours in the dressing with the seasoning to be palatable.

French Fried Potatoes.—Wash and peel small potatoes and cut in eighths lengthwise, cover with cold water for an hour. Drain and parboil in boiling salted water for two minutes, drain again, plunge into cold water, dry between towels and fry in deep fat until delicately browned, a few at a time. Heat the fat to a higher temperature, turn all the potatoes into a frying basket and fry until crisp and brown, keeping the basket in motion. Drain on paper and sprinkle with salt.

Scalloped Potatoes With Ham.—Slice very thin enough potatoes for the number to serve. Arrange in layers in a well-buttered baking dish, add a layer of finely minced onion, then a layer of any cold cooked ham either sliced or minced, another layer of potatoes and, when the dish is full, cover with milk. Cover well after plenty of seasoning of butter and salt and bake until tender.

Potato Fritters.—Take two cupfuls of hot riced potatoes, two tablespoonfuls of cream, one teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of cayenne and nutmeg, the yolks of two eggs well beaten and two tablespoonfuls of orange juice, fold in the beaten whites and set the bowl in ice water, beat until cold then add one-half cupful of flour and when well mixed drop by spoonfuls into deep fat. Fry until brown.

Spanish Potatoes.—Boil or steam the amount of potatoes to serve. Place in the vegetable dish in which they are to be served, two to four tablespoonfuls of butter and a tablespoonful of minced onion for each two of butter, the amount depends upon the amount of potato, add salt and a little cayenne and turn with the butter and onion. Serve hot.

Baked Pork Chops With Potatoes.—Arrange as many potatoes, thinly sliced, as needed in a shallow baking pan, over them arrange pork chops, seasoning both the chops and the potatoes. Pour in enough milk to keep the potatoes well moistened and bake until the meat is well browned, turning once.

Saratoga Chips.—Wash and peel potatoes and slice with a potato slicer into a bowl of cold water. Drain, plunge into a kettle of boiling water and cook one minute. Drain again, and cover with cold water. Drain and dry between towels. Fry in deep fat until a light brown, keeping in motion with a skimmer. Drain on brown paper and sprinkle with salt.

Stuffed Figs.—Mash cream cheese with heavy cream adding a bit of salt and cayenne. Make into balls three-fourths of an inch in diameter. Cut well washed and dried figs on the side and stuff with the cheese. Arrange on a plate in piles.

"But we used to act together at Drury Lane," replied the tattered one. "Is that so!" exclaimed Garrick. "In what play?" "In 'Hamlet.' I took the part of the cock and crowed behind the curtain."

Trying to Please Him

"Ah, monsieur! I call to see Mr. Smith," said the foreign visitor.

HARRY L. PARKMAN SEEKS RE-ELECTION ON RECORD

Friends of Harry L. Parkman, assemblyman from the Forty-second district, comprising all of San Mateo county, are rallying to his support and confidently predicting that he will be re-elected on the record of his performance as a legislator from this county to the state capital at Sacramento.

Assemblyman Parkman introduced eleven bills, all of a constructive nature in the interests of this county, and his friends are pointing out that the voters of the county will hardly care to experiment with another legislator in the face of the eleven constructive bills that Assemblyman Parkman managed to get through the legislature and made into laws that benefit everyone in the county.

"Harry Parkman is willing to stand or fall on his record," said a spokesman for the assemblyman today. "He was in the thick of the various fights in the state legislature at the last session and he managed to get made into laws eleven measures, all favorable to the best interests of San Mateo county."

One of his bills was an educational measure for school children with defective speech. This bill carried with it an appropriation of $35,000, an ample fund to take care of the corrective remedies necessary to restore these unfortunate children to normalcy, and won for Parkman the endorsement of forward looking citizens not only in this county, but throughout the state. Club women, pastors of the churches, civic bodies, Parent-Teachers' Associations throughout the county and the state stood back of Parkman's constructive legislation and heartily endorsed it.

Parkman is making his fight for re-election on the record of his achievement at Sacramento that he made for San Mateo county, and his thousands of friends and supporters are working harder in his behalf this time than they did before, when they elected him by an overwhelming majority.

Parkman's friends are making a personal canvass in his behalf, and from his headquarters issue most encouraging reports. San Mateo county's assemblyman is making a strong personal canvass in his own behalf and his workers in all parts of the county are putting forward Parkman's constructive record of accomplishments for San Mateo county as an unanswerable argument in his favor.—(Advertisement.)

GOOD BILL AT STATE THEATRE

Next Saturday, August 18, the State Theatre will present Belle Bennett and Anita Stewart in "Wild Geese," that much talked of picture, while the Juvenile entertainers will be on hand.

Next Sunday, August 19, there will be two splendid features, Bebe Daniels in "The Fifty-Fifty Girl," and Rex, the Horse, in "Wild Beauty."

Next Monday, August 20, the State will present George O'Brien in "East Side, West Side." There will also be other attractions.

"The Patent Leather Kid," one of the best pictures Richard Barthelmess has ever appeared in, will be at the State for three days, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 21, 22 and 23. You should see this picture by all means.

On Friday, August 24, the popular Pola Negri will be seen in "The Secret Hour." Eddie's Advershow is also scheduled for Friday.

Buddhist priests of Tibet who make paintings of Buddha usually draw the face on the 15th day of the month and color it on the 13th, these being sacred dates.

DuPonts have forbidden the use of mechinical cigar lighters in their plants. Must be afraid one of them might really light some time.

BIG INVESTMENT IN FAIR GROUNDS

California has a round million dollars invested in the State Fair grounds at Sacramento, which sum was actually spent in cash to make the annual tableau what it will be September 1 to 8, according to A. R. Heron, state director of finance. In value, however, the fair grounds are worth far more to the state than a million dollars, due to the rises in real estate since 1905.

The state spent a total sum of $68,178 for the 115 acres it owns in Sacramento and uses as fair grounds. A small part of this acreage was acquired in gifts. The rise in real estate value, Heron points out, is such that $275 an acre was paid for land in 1905, while the last purchase twenty years later cost the state $5,000 an acre.

Buildings and equipment cost the state $894,758, according to the last inventory submitted to the department of finance. The new machinery building alone, which will be used for the first time at the 1928 fair, represents an investment of $100,000, while the new grandstand, placed in use two years ago, cost $209,982.

It is the plan of the administration to have one new building a year on the state fair grounds, Governor C. C. Young has announced, and in ten years time, if the present program is maintained, the state will have an investment totaling more than two million dollars in actual money in the fair grounds, not taking into consideration the theoretical value of the land.

In all probability a live stock building will be constructed in 1929, and plans are already being pushed forward for a natural resources building. For 1930 a new educational building is being talked of. Among other projects are a woman's building and a fine arts building.

COLEBERD FOR ASSEMBLY

With the growth and rapid trend of this county to an important place in this state the representation of this district in the state legislature likewise becomes of paramount importance to the people. Perhaps never before in the entire political history of the county has a man so eminently fitted for the place as J. W. Coleberd offered his name as a candidate for the assembly.

Mr. Coleberd has been a practicing attorney in this county for 17 years, during which time he has served as city attorney of South San Francisco for over fifteen years, framed legislation for the League of Municipalities and has had contact with laws and legislation to a degree not exceeded by many who have actually served as law makers. He is an esteemed member of the bar of the county, being at this time president of the San Mateo County Bar Association. With this position it is needless to say that he has the support and confidence of the leading attorneys of the county.

Coleberd's candidacy comes from the pepole of this county and not from outside influences which are attempting more and more in recent years to influence politics here.

J. W. Coleberd is a graduate of two eastern universities and has the background educationally of extensive travel and study in continental Europe as a young man. He was high school principal and superintendent of schools in Indiana and was a high school principal in Michigan. He came to California nearly twenty years ago and entered the practice of law and settled in South San Francisco over 17 years ago, where he has built up an enviable reputation as lawyer, citizen and scholar.

It is rare indeed that men of such stamp and eminent fitness can be induced to give of their time for public service. It behooves the voters to post themselves upon the fitness of this candidate, who whole heartedly represents the county and feels its interest. The county needs a strong representative and an able one. Coleberd fills all the qualifications for the legislature.—Advertisement.

FORD HELPS A WORKER

Henry Ford was walking through one of his laboratories one day explaining various experiments to a visitor.

Suddenly Mr. Ford stopped and stood watching an engineer who was at work on a very delicate problem. For several minutes the manufacturer said nothing, and then addressing himself to the engineer he declared:

"You'll never get the right answer the way you're tackling that."

"How would you do it Mr Ford?" inquired the engineer.

"Not the way you're trying it," replied Ford, walking away.

As they moved along the visitor was inquisitive. He hazarded a remark:

"You didn't give that man much help."

"On the contrary, I gave him a great deal of help. I switched him off the wrong track. He's a good man. He'll find the answer. He asked me what I would do and if I had told him it wouldn't have helped him. It would have hurt him. It would have made him less dependent upon himself.

Another paradox is that a legless Oregon man has been arrested for bootlegging.

NEW HIGHWAY PLAN APPROVED BY BOARD

Plans for the extension of the widened Junipero Serra boulevard from the county line through San Mateo county to Burlingame were approved last Monday by the San Francisco board of supervisors. The vote was eleven to three for the project, which will involve payment by San Francisco of approximately $2,400,000, and provide nine miles of new, first class highway.

The vote was taken in endorsement of a report by the directors of a joint highway commission, made up of the supervisors of the two counties, which had been presented several weeks ago. The debate over the action was quite lengthy and spirited.

Poor Grammar

Teacher (to boy sitting idly in school during writing time): "Henry, why are you not writing?"

Henry: "I ain't got no pen."

Teacher: "Where's your grammar?"

"You look like Helen Brown."

"Is that so? Well, I look even worse in red."

If dissatisfied with other coal, remember "ABERDEEN."

Overheard at Show

"I left a bottle of Scotch in the train."

"Gosh, that's tough. Was it turned in to the lost and found department?"

"No, but the fellow who found it was."

Light Laughter

A gentleman slipped on the top stair of the subway and started sliding to the bottom. Half way down, he collided with a lady, knocked her off her feet and the two continued the journey together. After they had reached the bottom, the lady, still dazed, continued to sit on the gentleman's chest. Looking up at her politely, he finally exclaimed: "Madam, I'm sorry, but this is as far as I go."

F' Heaven's Sake

The Old Spinster: "Has the canary had its bath yet?"

The Maid: "Yes, he has, mum. You can come in now."

When you think of building, think of H. H.

We'll Bet on Hubby

The Literary Wife: "When I go to heaven I am going to ask Shakespeare if he wrote all his plays."

Practical Husband: "But he may not be there."

The Literary Wife: "Then you can ask him."

"STERLING," the Wallboard of satisfaction.

"Dat baby of you's," said Mrs. Jackson, "am de puffect image of his fathah."

"Yas," answered Mrs. Johnson. "He am a reg'lar carbon copy."
